Activities coming under the terms of this agreement will be based on the spirit of reciprocity and mutual benefit and may encompass the following areas: curriculum development, accreditation, teacher training, and business and community outreach in the areas of the four specialties already operating at the college, the vocational education program starting in fall 2009, and any others which may be developed during the future operation of this agreement; quality assurance and administration of the college study program; career services and other student development programs; exchange of faculty, staff, and administrators; student exchanges and study abroad activities; joint proposal development and exchange of consultants; cultural exchanges; short term training programs of mutual benefit; and other activities as mutually determined, from time to time.

- continuing the high level of teaching and learning in the core curricula now operating: business English, hotel/hospitality, small business, agricultural business, and construction management subjects, as well as in ones that may be added;

III. PROGRAM IMPLEMENTATION

Gori University, on behalf of the Gori College program, and CCID, through the leadership initiatives undertaken by the CCID home office in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and the CCID representative office in Tbilisi, will act as principals for the promotion and implementation of this agreement and as central agencies for information about facilitation of, and coordination of new programs to be developed for Gori College by Gori University and CCID. The needs of both parties will be registered, reviewed, and coordinated through consultation with each other.

Gori University, CCID, and the CCID representative office may support possible fund-raising efforts in Georgia, the U.S., and in other countries in support of projects which fall under this agreement. Joint program development activities may be supported through letters of endorsement, technical writing in support of grant applications, and coordination of promotion and marketing efforts for cooperative programs and exchange activities.

IV. ADMINISTRATION OF THE AGREEMENT

Both parties agree to monitor the progress of this basic agreement through generation of reports and, where possible, exchange visits. Written correspondence and e-mail will be the customary working method of evaluation, but when necessary, meetings for consultation and decision will be held. Both parties agree with the importance of continuous communication between and among officials of Gori College, Gori University, and the CCID representative office at Georgian Technical University for these administrative activities. Any international travel to and within the receiving country will be covered by the visiting party or through grant funding.
